them allways living at his house, there is great Reason to think that he is principally concerned in sending them on some of his customary Fraudulencies. The Canajoharees on hearing of their Departure sent to me, desiring their Journey should be stopped, as they were ignorant of the Cause of it, and justly apprehend they go on no good Design. I shall be glad you will please to take this into Consideration, and do therein what you may think necessary, as also favour me with your Sentiments about it.

I understand M⁷. SIR

I had the Pleasure to receive your Letter of the 3d. Inst. the Day before yesterday, and am greatly obliged to you for the Pains you are taking to fit out a large Party to go and attack the villains of Kanestio. As you observe, if the Indians are once entered it will become their own Quarrell and we must reap great Benefit from their Assistance, if they are brought to espouse our cause heartily. I hope the want of Ammunition will not delay the Party; If you shall have applied for it to the officer Commanding the Artillery in Albany, I am perswaded he will have granted it you on this Extraordinary service without any particular order for it. I write to Him by this Opportunity, directing Him to grant you such supplys as you shall demand.

I am perswaded you will do on every occasion what is most Beneficial for the service, therefore leave it to you to regulate the Pay of the officers and woodsmen.

Lawrence Blasius came to me for an order to embark in the Transports with his two Indians, which I refused, without seeing a Pass from you for the savages to leave the Country. I have talked to the L¹. Gov¹, about this Affair, & shall make all the search after them that is possible. No private Grants of Land whatever will be allowed of, and we must take every Measure necessary to prevent it.

In my last I desired your opinion of everything necessary to be done, in case of an Accommodation with the Indians. If

DEAR SIR -

I had the pleasure of your Excellencys letter of the 23d. Ulto. and it gives me no small Satisfaction to find that the French are to cede all Louisiana, to the King of Spain. the latter will be a much less dangerous Enemy than the former, and have less influence over the Indians, so that I consider the news of ye, greatest importance. -

I am now makeing up a large party to go against Kanestio, which is a numerous Nest of Villains composed cheifly of Senecas, Shawanese, & a few Delawares, when the Indians are once entered, it will inevitably become their own Quarrel, and effectually break the Union wh. alone we have to dread. -

The Officers & Woodsmen shall be imediately procured, I propose haveing a Capta, at 10s Curcy, and a Lieut, or two at 8s B Diem Each (they had formerly 10°. Strg., & Lieuts. 5°) and the Woodsmen at 4s Currey. R day, finding themselves in provision, Arms, Snow-Shoes & everry article Amunition excepted, for which I must apply to your Excellency, as well as for what ye. Indians will necessarily require, it being too great an Expence to purchase it at the prices of this Country. -

I have received information that one Lawrence Blasius a German Taylor who is an Inhabitant of Conajohare has persuaded two Young Indians of that place to go with him to England, and they are now in New York, on which Acett. ye. Indians have complained to me requesting they may by all means be prevented from going, as they apprehend, & I beleive rightly that 'tis a design of one George Klock who has already bred great distrubance amongst them by forming Parties & seduceing them to give private Grants of Lands. I submit to your Excellency wt. is best to be done in that case. -

BLACK RIVER BOOKS, BOONVILLE, NY

HART p. 115, 121, 132-133 HUGENINES p. 122-123, 160 taunted them upon their weak optics and said what they needed was specs. "He's sittin' up there as pretty as you like, just to the left of that mullein stalk." Still they couldn't see the creature. Well I am goin' to blow his head off. Watch!" He aimed, fired, and spurted dust within inches of the bee. The boys dashed up to see what had happened, and there it was, dead as the door nail on Rudy Yost's shanty, "head off clean as a whistle," as the boys told the story back home.

A story was also current of George's endeavors in the debt collecting field. It seems that a lock tender down the canal a piece owed him some money, and all efforts to corral it had failed. He was a duck fancier, was the debtor, and by means of a flock of birds, which were always swimming noisily in the canal, he kept the Sunday dinner a successful institution at his lock house. All other collection stunts failing, George fixed it up with Albert Hoffmeister, a boat hand, that next time through he swing out of the lock and through the bird's hangout drag a line with a hook baited with corn. It worked. A bird bit on the ruse and, when it had been towed out of sight it was brought aboard and delivered at lock 70. This went on until George figured that the debt had been paid in full.

At lock 70 quite a lot of talent was essential. George himself had boated it for a number of years, having owned a couple of boats, and he knew the problems of the boatmen, and the peculiarities of most of them. This alone, however, would not have been enough. The keeper here must also tend the waste-weir that at this point let surplus water out of the summit level and discharged it, tumbling, as pretty as a picture, over a ledge of rocks into Sink Hole Pond. The job called for watchfulness and patience, and Williamson had a good back-log of both. It took more than just a lock and an extrovert boatman to ruffle his poise! There is a story of how, on the evening of July 3, in 1893, a thunderstorm struck, with a bolt of lightning that practically wrecked the receiver on the lockhouse telephone. Asked about it next morning by Byron Scouten, on his way to Utica with a load of Denton and Waterbury wood, George replied, "Oh, that was just me practisin' my fourth of July fireworks."

It is a coincidence that in 1885, George's first year at 70, he had as neighbor at 69 another Williamson, Tom—no kinship so far as these researches have discovered. Then after his retirement in 1895 a cousin, Andrew, likewise a war veteran, came on at 69, later being given 70.

George had as a neighbor, at Lock 60, Rudy Yost, who added much to the more refined pieces is of how, catching a mess of eels he put them in a barrel of pork to preserve them. To his utter distress he discovered that while it preserved the eels it made them uneatable and completely ruined the pork. And as if that were not enough the barrel itself defied attempts at fumigation. He soaked it in the canal and he scrubbed it with lye, but, as he reported the business, it still stenched. In a moment of desperation he tried to sell it to Ira Hart. Rudy suspected Ira of being the miscreant who from a stance on his boat took a pot shot at his wife, who was picking blackberries just beyond a screen of undergrowth. "Hadn't been that she was bendin' over he'd of got her sure." Had Rudy put the deal over he would have evened the score, but Ira, whom everybody was having grudges against, needed no barrels that day and Rudy in desperation burned it.

Berry picking along the canal was not one of the less hazardous pastimes. The records reveal that the wife of Jim Johnson, of Port Leyden, captain at various times of the "Charter Oak," "Peter J. Rohr," and "Francis S. Norton," narrowly escaped death under similar circumstances.

This same locality served as the setting for one of the more ambitious of Dick Warren's adventures. It seems that Dick set out one morning around about sun-up for a trudge to Boonville. He started so early that lock tenders were yet asleep in their lock-houses and boat people in their snubbed up boats. All except John McAdams with the "R. C. Wade," who, considerate of other people's sleeping habits, was locking himself through 69, presided over by John Stabb. Dick broke in on the scene. "Where's John?"

John nodded towards the lock house. "Dead to the world."

Dick went into immediate action. Without asking for further light he tore up the towpath for Boonville. Here upon arrival he began to spread the ghastly news. John Stabb was dead. Word spread fast and into the farthest precincts of the village. The undertaker was already harnessing his team when relatives of Stabb called on the telephone to assign to him the grisly task of fetching the remains and readying them

More About Lock Tenders

Along the exciting Alpine reaches of the canal, roughly from the present Pixley Park to lock 35, the locks were manned, more than by any other family group, by the Clarks. This was the region of the "Gulfers," a term of derision by which the folks on the hills denoted the citizens of "Frog Hollow," this latter in turn a phrase applied to the region by the humorists. On their part the Gulfers got even with the hills by encouraging the legend of the Zekes. This pretty legend was of how in ancient days two brothers lived atop the high hills, one on either side of the Lansing Kill, a good half mile apart. Both were stentorian as to their vocal powers. One of them particularly so, and when of a morning he sought news of his brother Zeke he would face across the valley and give. "H'lo . . . Zeke!" When the ringing welkin had subsided, back would come such data as the occasion required and an inquiry as to the welfare of the other, and what was cooking for the day. For the neighbors a half hour of this was as excellent a medium for picking up useless information as the party telephone line and the radio quiz programs were later to become. And to this day there are wives along the Lansing Kill who, at such moments as their husbands tend to reach up into the higher decible brackets, bring the business to a quick end with a gentle, "Now, Zeke--"

Of all the locks on the canal the Five Combines (the word in local circles accented on the second syllable) were the most exacting, demanding of the keeper an unusual degree of patience, unremitting attention to details and general competence. In any one of the five locks a set of gates could be wrecked by an irresponsible boatman trying to bull in with sixty or seventy tons of lumber aboard. Especially if he was going down stream, with an ever present current to be managed in snubbing into the lock. More than that, the boat would have but a scant six-inch clearance between lock wall and boat, and since the boat practically scraped bottom, the greater part of the water inside the lock chamber would be displaced.

Here was no job for a novice, nor for poorly constructed gates. A misstep and a boat could crash into the lower gates of the upper lock, and, out of control, stop at nothing until it reached bottom, it and its cargo a complete loss. That such accidents were rare may be credited to the skill of the tenders.

Fewer hazards confronted the boatman coming up. At the bottom of the Fives, where the sluiceway, rushing down from the level above, poured into the canal, was a danger spot. Here a steersman, heading for lock 39, swallowed many a cuss word if he was a church goer, and let go with a vivid vocabulary if he was not. A boat must head into the counter currents here set up at just the right angle or might find his boat crashing, with fatal results, against the docking built to guard the lock's approaches. Once inside 39, however, the steersman's worries were over, provided he exercised a decent caution climbing the ascent of the five locks.

The Fives were almost continuously, throughout the canal's operations, in the keeping of members of the Clark family. To a man they had boated, and having run a boat was the best possible education in the intricate business of the Combines. The first of the Clarks had come into the valley from up in the town of Steuben, where on old maps "Clark's Hill" marks the spot.

Roscoe, of all the family, turned in the longest record for service at the locks. He started in 1895 with Abe Hart, and wound up there upon abandonment in 1922. Not that he was at the station continuously: only during Republican administrations. He would have no truck with Democratic canal control, and always upon a switch, even when asked to remain, he went back to boating or other occupations until normalcy was restored.

Two men were assigned to the Combines, a chief tender and a helper.

Roscoe's apprenticeship was under Abe Hart, and thereafter at such times as he served he was in charge. Abe and Roscoe got on well together and during one of Roscoe's time-outs they ran the Ferguson-built "Lua and Harry" for G. H. P. Gould, a boat named for Gould's two children.

During Roscoe's long periods of service the second man at the locks might be his step-father, Albert Remp, or his half-brother, Leo Remp. His father, it should be added, Lafayette Clark, had tended lock, though for but a single season when a young man. Until his death in 1876 he was a boatman, among his boats being the "Myrtle Sarah," Gue-built and named for his daughter; the "Willie," a wild boat, and the "Nellie," also made by Gue and named for the builder's daughter.

All this time Roscoe's cousin, Morgan Clark, Jr., an uncle, Orwell, and still another uncle, Martin, and his son Martin Jr., known to one and all as "Marty," were for several years in the 1880's at the Fives. The farthest from the Combines the Clarks ever got, as a matter of fact, was, to the south, lock 35, which Orwell Clark tended in the 1880's, until he took over 37 and 38 as his almost exclusive province. Northward the extreme limit of Clark territory was 47, tended for a long term of years in the early part of the present century by Marty Clark. Even Arch Plato, Lafayette's brother-in-law, who with his "Col. J. Van Woert" had been hauling Denton and Waterbury lumber, could not get far from the Clark stamping ground, for in 1895 he took over locks 52 and 53, and in 1900 was at the Fives with Roscoe.

The only boating Clark never to tend lock was Olney Clark, son of Stoars. Stoars, son of Orwell, had seen active service as a captain, among his boats being the "R. C. Wade," and had been a construction boss on the job of repairing the feeder after the great 1897 break at Forestport. He lived at the mouth of the Clark Gorge, near lock 36. His service on the locks ended only with the demise of the canal. Given a little more time Olney like as not would have got into lock keeping, for at the time of abandonment he was yet on the sunny side of his 'twenties.

Further south the Hugenines comprised a small but compact lock-tending family. Peter S. was always keeping locks. At various times he was at 30, 31 and 32 throughout the 1880's and well into the 1890's, ending his career in 1915 at 32. This was the lock on which his brother Jacob started in 1881, and Bert in 1897, Jake having transferred his affections to 52 and 53, and Bert later going, with Chester Nestle, to 33 and 34. The roster closes with Dave, Jacob's son, who, previously a boatman, in 1883 was reported as clearing in Boonville with the "R. H. Roberts," carrying 65,000 feet of spruce lumber bound for Albany. Dave was the family's most active boatman, in addition to the "Roberts" having run the "Charles Downer" and the "Henry Glasser."

To the Hugenine list should be added, though he never boated nor tended lock, Peter F. Hugenine, Peter's nephew, who, an artist living in Rome, threw the entire canal-side into a dither such as the Lansing Kill country never had known. It all happened in 1901, when Peter discovered gold and silver up in the Chase Brook gorge where the stream comes down off Webster Hill into the valley at Dunn Brook. From lock to lock the news spread, especially when the discoverer brought in mining and assaying equipment and found that the rock would yield sixty dollars to the ton, and by this time could report that interested Rome capital was going to back the project. Overnight options all the way from North Western to Boonville, on both sides of the Kill, covered every likely, and even unlikely, acre of land. One old-timer, who could remember the day when news of the gold strike came through from Sutter's Creek, is said to have remarked that the California affair, for sheer excitement, was not a "patchin' to this one right here to home. Who'd thunk it!"

Mining engineers centered their operations at the Chase farm, and among the multitudes Mrs. Chase apparently was the only skeptic: she was too busy meditating upon the board bill that began to mount up to speculate upon the chances of a strike.

From all reports the canal folk kept their excitement within bounds through it all; boatman were used to hearing, in the northern section, of gold being found along the Moose, and silver on other Lewis County streams, and were pretty well insulated against excessive enthusiasm over the liklihood of anything being found in Oneida County. Anyhow it was all over within a twelve-month.

Numerically the greatest of all lock-tending families was made up of the Van Dewalkers, of Hillside. Hillside in those days was a lively spot, boasting of a postoffice bearing the name of Leila (pronounced Leela), a distinction shared by Dunn Brook, though the latter community did not go in for fancy names for its postoffices. Be that as it may, Hillside was the seat of the Van Dewalkers. The lock-tending roll, so far as available records reveal the names, consisted of Squire (there were two of them), at various times at locks 14, 18, 28 and 29; Will, Bert, Isaiah, W. H., Fred, S. B., Isaac, Berlin, Warren, G. H., Martin, George, Clinton, A., and Peter. The author has compiled the list from such sources as are available, but can give no assurance that it is complete; further, he has attempted to reduce the names to a system showing the relationname. Luke tended lock over the years, as did Del, and back in the early 1870's Bill was running the "S. M. Ferguson," and later on Gaylord was captain of the "S. O'Connor," rebuilt as the "Mohawk," then having the "J. H. Williams." Mostly, however, the men of the name were on the staff of the State shop. Like Eri, who in 1883 was on the State scow with a team and Jerome, foreman for a score of years, and Glenn, his son. Charley and Tom complete the roster so far as these studies have revealed the names.

Marcus Trask and his son William comprised a two-man tending team. Marcus, who lived at the foot of the Capron dugway, a hundred yards or so above the entrance to Pixley Park, after 1885 was, until 1912, on locks right at his front door, 48 and 49 mostly, ending up at 50. Only once during that entire period was he farther away than 54 and 55. William's first lock came in 1902, when with his father he had 50 and 51. Except these two, his lock career was spent at 49. Neither of the Trasks boated.

The Trasks had as an occasional caller, Bill Marshall, who in the 1910's tended the Upper Threes. Whether he brought along any of his recipes for flapjacks history does not record, but it does state that on one occasion he told of being asked by Charley Pratt in Boonville wouldn't he like to go up and cook for the men in one of the Pratt lumber camps. Bill pondered the offer for a minute or two and finally asked, "Where would be a place for me to eat, Charley?" Charley asked couldn't he eat right there in the shanty and Bill said "Hell no, I couldn't stand eating my cooking."

The Harts mostly took to boating, although Isaiah, father to Ira and brother to Dan, two of the best known Harts, tended lock at 48 and 49 as early as 1880. Dan will be remembered by older canal men as having had a sawmill at Hurlbutville in the same period. Ira was a bank watch, likewise in the 1880's, his watch extending from 33 to 70. Otherwise he was engaged in sundry activities. He had a store at the Five Combines, which burned in 1876. Long before that, in the 1860's, he had owned the "C. E. Stevens," carrying pig-iron from Carthage to Utica. At certain other times he had a store at Hurlbutville and got out wood from along the Lansing Kill. In these and other activities he succeeded in stirring up an unbelievable number of resentments. The nearest he ever came to getting his come-uppances, however, was when Herbert Fitch, a young man from over east of the canal, into one of his columns of news notes which he contributed to the Boonville Herald dropped a brief paragraph: "Having built a floating summer residence, Ira Hart and wife are quietly gliding eastward on the raging Eric Canal." The entire valley chuckled, one and all aware that the floating palace was a tow of spars and piles upon which Ira was heading for Troy.

Abe and Tom Hart, brothers, were cousins of Ira's. Abe was associated, as has elsewhere been noted, with the Five Combines. Tom was given the Upper Threes—this Tom is not to be confused with another Tom Hart, a man of affairs who lived in Boonville. Abe's son Walter was a boatman, owner of the "Arthur F. Pilbeam" and the Ferguson-built "George B. Anderson," and ended the roster of the canalling Harts.

brothers of Emma Hart around to see whether he has rolled back into the water and drowned. His principal characteristics are his voice, his rock-ribbed sides, his sense of humor, his patient toil, his practical immorality, and his ability to live and work almost without food."

Tom Shanks was the one boatman that had a preference for mules over horses for the tow-path, while from older boatmen one hears now and then, sketchily, of a white mule, always, however, so faint a figure as to raise it practically to the status of a phantom towing mule, the first mule possibly ever to have achieved the distinction.

The character of the canal as the product of a locality was further heightened by its tendency from the first for boating and other canal activities to shake down into family groups. At any moment a lock-tender might be letting through a brother, or a cousin of first, second or third rank, and uncles of the same grades, or in-laws without number. And if it wasn't a relative it would be somebody who knew a relative. All of which contributed to the development of a folksy character that could not prevail down on the Erie, where hominess paid homage to hurry.

And the finest touch was given by the many wives, with their children, who accompanied their boating husbands, keeping the boat tidy, the larder filled, and providing as much as could be the comforts of home, even on occasion the bearing of children. Among these was Jess Cronk, born on his father's boat in lock 70; it is an interesting fact that his nephew, Erv Lake, was born in the lock house at 70, his father tender there at the time. John Brockert, son of Henry, himself to become a boatman, was another boat-born child.

And there were occasions when with her husband a boating wife spent the winter aboard, the boat tied up, and winterized so far as could be, at a convenient spot. Mrs. Betty Hugenine, who boated for many years with her husband, David Hugenine, informs the author that one time two winters in a row were spent by them tied up in the Boonville basin, finding the winter-bound craft a most pleasant and comfortable abode.

Out of conditions like these grew, the student of the canal discovers, those qualities that made the Black River unique in many ways among canals, and that provided memories that today make pleasant dreaming for all who lived and worked along its picturesque levels. Dear Chris:

Just a quick note before we take off for Maine to do some genealogy on my mother's family. I went to Boonville Thursday, and stayed overnight, met some nice people, visited 10 cemeteries (there are at least 8 in the Town of Boonville) and had a thoroughly good time. I met Uncle Hugh at the Utica Airport and we drove back up here last night.

In the cemetery at the North Steuben M. E. Church in the Town of Steuben, I found the following:

WILLIAM TUBBS 1822 - 1860 AMY R. TUBBS 1823 - 1889

This one looked good, but the dates aren't right. RUSSEL TUBBS (50) died Jan. 11, 1850 age 49 yrs, 9 mo. 14 da.

NANCY, wife of RUSSEL TUBBS Died Nov. 16, 1865 age 59 yrs & 9 mo.

I think this is our Russel, son of Wm. & Amy Satterlee.

If you will write to the State Highway Dept., Albany, they will send you a list of county maps available & where. If you write to Niagara County Highway Dept., 225-231 So. Niagara St., Lockport, 14091, they will send you free a map of Niagara County, with a good map of Lockport which shows at least 4 cemeteries. Good luck. Be sure to let me know if you find Roswell.

1865 CENSUS

TOWN OF WESTERN

North of the West Branch of the Mohawk River and the Blue Brook, County of ONEIDA, state of NEW YORK - 1st June 1865

Enumerator - A. P. Bussey 5th June 1865

This census is unique in that the enumerator, A. P. Bussey, has attempted to list the maiden names of the wives. In copying the census I noticed numerous cases where the husband and wife are listed as having the same surname. Here one must check other sources to determine if this is actually the situation as first second cousin marriages were a common practice. For example, other sources support the fact that a Keech married a Keech as listed on page 7,*57. The enumerator did not necessarily list the maiden names of widows and women listed as the mother of a family member.

In transcribing the census I have attempted to keep it as close to the original as possible. However, there are minor variations and no doubt some errors and omissions. I have underlined letters I felt were questionable. The letters giving the most problem were the enumerator's e for o and r for c, and visa versa. Also the enumerator seems to inconsistently combine the cursive 'r' with the cursive 'y' giving a letter that looks something like this y. Hence, May might be interpreted as May or Mary.

April 16, 1983

James S. Pitcher

Boonville, N.Y. 13309

Mr. William V. H. Barker 25 Wheeler Shelton, CT 06484

Dear Mr. Barker,

I have made some progress in identifying Henry H. Hart's parents, since my 7 July 1988 letter. I have determined he had an older-brother, John Hart, b 18 May 1806 in New York. When I add this John Hart to the family of Henry and Gurty Hart, the 1810 and 1820 Census information checks reasonably well.

Research done during the past eighteen months uncovered a John Hart family in 1820 Manheim Town Census. He is not listed in the New York 1820 Census Index.

I have correlated my Hart information against the 1790, 1800, 1810, 1820 and 1830 Montgomery and Herkimer Censuses. The work doesn't conclusively prove anything, but does raise some interesting questions about the John and Joseph Hart listed in the 1820 Manheim Town Census. Did the family of Johannes Hart and Sara Richert contain two additional children: John, b ca 1783 and Joseph b ca 1796. Have you uncovered any evidence of additional children? The 1810 and 1820 Censuses establish they were neighbors in Manheim Town. I've attached a copy of my work for your use.

There is no question about the Henry Hart b 1 July 1813. He was born in 1813. The Utica Library sent me a copy of the original Ft. Plain Reformed Dutch Church record. The handwriting is plain and bold.

I have been unable to locate a Henry Hart born in counties adjacent to Herkimer during the 1810-1820 time period. The search results are listed by counties.

Saratoga - The 1820 Census listed five Hart families, but the Saratoga Springs Public Library has no record of a Henry Hart born in the 1810-1820 period.

Schenectady - The Schenectady County Historical Society's files do not contain a Henry Hart. Mrs. Ann Ross searched the churches of Schenectady and found no Hart children baptized in the 1810-1820 period.

Ostego County had one Hart family listed in the 1820 Census, Oliver B. Hart of Decatur. The New York Historical Association has no records on this family. The Decatur Town Historian has a listing of those buried in the Decatur Cemetery dating to 1800. No Harts are listed. He has not located any church records.

Oneida County - Mrs. Ann Brokaw searched the 1800-1820 records of seventeen Protestant churches. She didn't find one Hart. The "Pond Records" include a "Canvas of Families 1813-1816 for the Town of Whiteside, Oneida County, NY". It includes the Jesse Hart family with two female children and one child of unknown sex whose name started with a "L".

Schoharie County - The Schoharie County Historical Society doesn't list any Harts during the 1800 - 1820 period.

Town of Oppenheim, Fulton County - Their records start in 1838 when Fulton County was established.

Madison County - William H. Tuttle's "Names and Sketches of the Pioneer Settlers of Madison County, New York" lists several Harts, but they do not fit into my picture. I also had Ann Brokaw check the county records in Wampville and the land and surrogate records in Oneida. She found nothing relevant.

Albany County - IGI Records list a Henry Hart, b 28 Jan 1818, parents not listed.

The result of this work establishes that either the information that Henry was born in Manheim Town is in error, or the parents of brothers John and Henry Hart lived in Manheim Town only a short time between the 1810 and 1820 Censuses, or my Great Grandfather Henry H. Hart didn't know his correct date of birth and he is the son of Henry Hart and Gurty House, b 1 July 1813.

The 1988 IGI Records are not helpful. They did provide information on the Issac Hart, Listed in the 1820 Census in German Flatts. His wife was Mary Smith and they had a son Henry b 28 Jan 1812. If other records ever existed, they probably were in the Snells Bush Church that burned in 1854. At this point, I have no other leads. Any ideas?

On a different Hart related subject, I have been corresponding with James F. (Jim) Morrison, 95 Lincoln St., Gloversville, NY 12078, concerning the Tilleborough Raid. Based on Simms, I thought the Tilleborough Raid occurred on 20 April 1778. He has sent me several items, including some from the British side, definitely establishing the date as 20 April 1779. This same information also states it was a Henry Hart, not Conrad Hart, who was killed. Henry was a member of Colonel Klock's Militia Regiment. Admittedly the pension application of Mary Christina Hart, wife of Henry Hart, states Henry was killed on 20 April 1778. Probably the date is in error and the error was never discovered, because the application is contained in Volume A of the Audited Accounts.

Jim states "Conrad Hart did serve in Capt Nicholas Rechtor's Company but I've not been able to prove if he was killed or if his name was Henry Conrad Hart or Conrad Henry Hart, or if they were two different people. Henry's widow put in for his pay and I've found no 18th century proof that Conrad was killed."

Have you read the two volumes of "Our Todays and Yesterdays in the Town of Ephratah"? Jim Morrison wrote the article "A Sad Day In Tilleborough", in Volume I that states Henry Hart was killed in the Tilleborough Raid. Page 14, Volume II states Conrad Hart was a settler in Dillenborough (Tillaborough). The inclusion of both a Henry Hart and Conrad Hart creates more confusion. Do you have any clarifying information?

The Albany County Clerk found no land records relating to Conrad Hart of Tilleborough.

The Montgomery County Clerk found land records for Conrad Hart, but they are dated 1805 and 1830.

Do you know the origin of the Conrad Hart who married Appollana Countryman? I haven't seen any evidence that he is the son of Conrad (21169). Was he even related to Conrad (21169)? Or was he the Conrad Hart in Colonel Klock's Regiment? Could he have been the brother of the Henry (Conrad) Hart (21169) killed at Tilleborough?

Have you uncovered any additional information on the Hart families? When do you expect to publish your Montgomery Families book?

Sincerely,

John H. Hart

Subject: Re: Boonville Hart information

Hi Chris.

Well our trip to Boonville was very worthwhile. We met with Jim Pitcher (town historian), and he provided us with more valuable information.

I now have a complete history of our Tubbs link, both yours and mine it was put together by Frank H. Phillips. He put together a very unique graphic presentation, which I'm sure you'd be interested in. I'd be happy to send a copy if you'd like, just send me your address.

My Nancy Tubbs' father was Russell Tubbs and her mother was Nancy Clark Tubbs. Russell Tubbs was the son of William Tubbs and Amy Satterlee, so he was the brother of your Amy Tubbs. The chart traces the Satterlee line all the way back to Philip Bocland, Lord of Shaddingford (Soterley) who lived during the 1100's in England.

We also found information on William and Barbary Hart. Apparently they were German Palantines. We found their marriage recorded in the Marriage Record of the Stone Arabia Reformed Church in Herkimer. They were married on January 15, 1797 -- William Hardt and Barba Heiser. Their son John's baptism is recorded in the Baptism Record of the same church with a birthdate of June 23, 1797. The same records show another son William born in 1803, son Jacob born 1805, son George Chancy born 1809.

So much for the theory that there's a link to John Hart the signer of the Declaration!

We're still working to find out if Lawrence Blasier was Polly Blasier's father. Jim Pitcher only had documentation on the sons of Lawrence. There is information on Lawrence Blasier if we can prove the connection. The Blasiers were also German Palantines and there are Blasiers in the same Reformed Church in Herkimer.

You mentioned in an earlier email that you would send me a copy of your Hart information. I would love to see it if you wouldn't mind sending it! Thanks for the 1860 Census info.

I'll keep you posted on any further advances. If you're interested in contacting Jim Pitcher, his address is 159 Schuyler Street, Boonville, NY 13309. I'll bet you and he would have a lot of information to share.

Regards, Lisa Apsey

Greetings.

I have received information from the Boonville town historian, Jim Pitcher. He is really quite a resource! He sent me so much valuable information, and I think you might be interested in some of it. There's a biographical information sheet on a Minnie Hart Johnson. You already know most of this I am sure, because Minnie married Fenton Johnson, who was Emma Hart Johnson's son! Emma Hart is your great-grandmother, right? I'll attach it for you because it's so interesting, and you may not have this story.

It looks as if Isaiah was indeed Polly Blasier Hart and John Hart's oldest son, born in 1821. He died on March 22, 1890 according to the Boonville Herald. My mother and I are going to visit Boonville and vacinity on October 25-27 to research vital records. In the meantime I am trying to locate the death certificate.

He was married to Nancy Tubbs and they had four children: Ira (my ancestor) b 1842 d. 1892 Betsey b. 1850, married Marcus Trask Sarah Jane b. app.1852, married Jay Pixley Willie (died as an infant)

You wrote earlier that you thought that John Hart's parents were William Hart and Barbara Heiser. Mr. Pitcher sent me an excerpt from the North Steuben Cemetery list, and it lists:

Barabara, wife of William Hart, died July 31, 1850, age 81 years.

That sounds like the dates match! I am going to ask for Barabara's death certificate from the Boonville town clerk as well.

Mr. Pitcher also sent a family tree for Lawrence Blasier and Eva Wernerin. Do you think she Anglosized her name to Ann Werner? Let me know if you'd like me to look up anything for you.

MINNIE HART JOHNSON

On September 28, 1887, Fenton Wesley Johnson, a carpenter of Boonville, Oneida County, NY, and Minnie M. Hart were married in the town of Western by Rev. S.M. Crofoot of the Village of North Western. It was the first marriage for each. The witnesses were Wesley Johnson and Lizzie Jillson.

Fenton W. Johnson was born in Boonville, 20 January 1866, the son of Willaaam Henry and Emma (Hart) Johnson. Emma Hart was the oldest child of John Hart and Sabrina (Young) Hart. Emma's father, John Hart, was the son of John and Polly (Blasier) Hart.

Minnie M. Hart was born in Boonville in 1864 and lived in Western. She was the youngest of the two children of Daniel and Fanny (Huguenine) Hart. Her sister, Ella, was born in 1862. Fanny Huguenine was born in 1831, the daughter of Peter and Mary (Clemens) Huguenine. Fanny died 20 November 1893 of pneumonia while visiting her sister in Utica. Daniel Hart was the son of John and Polly (Blasier) Hart. He was born in 1836 in Saint Lawrence County. He is listed on the federal census as a lock tender (Black River Canal) although his death certificate gives his occupation as farmer. He died 20 November 1885 of typhoid pneumonia, at the age of 49. His funeral was held at the North Steuben Methodist Episcopal Church. On the death certificate this is given as the place of burial, but his name is on the monument in the cemetery at Wells Creek. Daniel was a younger brother of John Hart, father of Emma. Emma Hart and Minnie Hart, therefore, were first cousins. Fenton Johnson and his first wife, Minnie Hart, were first cousins once (one generation) removed.

Minnie Hart Johnson died 5 March 1888, aged 23 years, at Painseville, Lake County, Ohio, less than six months after her marriage. This compiler was not successfull in locating a death certificate, but family tradition says she died of tuberculosis. She is buried in Frenchville (Wells Creek) Cemetery on Route 46, town of Western, Onedia County. Also in the same cemetery with Peter and Mary Huguenine. There is a tall monument with HART and JOHNSON on the front in large letters. On the left side are the names of Daniel and Fanny, and on the right, Minnie, thus:

Hello again,

I have been reading an interesting book, Snubbing Posts, by Thomas O'Donnell. Have you ever heard of it? It's a great account of the history of the Black River canal. At any rate there are a few mentions of lock tenders and others associated with the canal — the Harts are among those briefly mentioned. If you have a fax I'd be happy to fax you the sections. It seems my ancestor, Ira, Isaiah's son, was not well liked at all!

I think my mother and I are going to have to make a trip up to the North Country to do some real research and possibly look into some old issues of the Boonville Herald, Lowville Journal and Utica Press. Do you think the Utica Public Library the place to start?

Greetings!

I can't tell you how excited I was to receive your message! My mother and I have tried to pick up where her father left off about 15-20 years ago. It's been a little frustrating, but so it goes...

My information is as follows:

My great-grandmother is Luella Hart Cielger (b.1882 in Boonville, d.1936 in Ava), husband was Burton Ciegler, methodist mininster. Luella's father was Ira Hart (b.1848, d.1890 near Boonville), mother was Louise Gleasman Hart (b.1848, d.1926 near Boonville). Louise's nickname was "Ma Hart", possibly just in the family-I'm not sure. She outlived her husband Ira by many years and was forced to support four daughters by running a successful bakery in the area. Her daughters were: Ida, Bertha, Luella and Grace.

My gr. grandmother, Luella, had recorded information in a baby book that listed Isiah Hart as her grandfather and Nancy Tubbs as her grandmother. This is where our information differs. You do not have information that John Hart and Polly (Mary) Blasier had a son named Isiah. I am checking with my mother to see where we have the information that connects Isiah to John and Polly.

I'll keep you posted with an update! Thanks again for your message.

Below is the result of your feedback form. It was submitted by () on Tuesday, April 8, 1997 at 21:44:18

surname: Hart

query: Looking for information on John Hart and Polly Blasier, father and mother of Isiah Hart (b.1818 in Boonville). We have traced Isiah and his wife Nancy (nee Tubbs, whose family was from N. Steuben, NY) to Boonville and know that Isiah tended locks on the Black River Canal at #48 and #49 near Hulbertville, NY in the 1880's.

The assumption has been handed down through many generations that we are related to the signer of the Declaration, John Hart, however, we need to find more info on Isiah's parents, John and Polly.

Any info would be much appreciated!

The original photo was a tintype dated 1872.

Mary Blasier, better known by her nickname of Polly, was a daughter of William and Barbary Hart.

This photo was once identified as being a daughter of Polly Blasier. However, I truly have doubts as to the validity of that identification.

D. J. BLASIER PASSES AWAY

Native of Western Dies at His Home in This City-Held in High Esteem,

David J. Blaster, aged 84 years, died at his home, 642 N. James street, at 9:30 o'clock this morning. His health had been failing gradually during the past seven years and he had been confined in bed since February 12. Death resulted from the natural infirmities accompanying advanced age.

Mr. Blasier was born in Western, June 13, 1837, a son of David and Catherine Teachout Blasier, whose deaths occurred there many years ago. His early life was spent in Western. At Steuben on February 14, 1845, he married Miss Susan C. Whipple, who survives and they established their home in Western, where Mr. Blasier was engaged in farming and operated a stone quarry and a cheese box factory.

The family came to Rome to make their home about 24 years ago and Mr. Blasier at once set himself to the task of laying the foundation and erecting the factory that stood at the corner of Dean and Parry streets. where for several years he successfully conducted the Blasier Handle Works. Most of the machinery used in his factory in the manufacture of the many varieties of wood handles was designed and built by himself. He was born a untural inventor and had accomplished much in the invention and practical demonstration of machines for making handles, the principles of which bespeak of the a.ventive mind.

Later on, because of advancing age he sold his factory and business to a stock company and retired.

He was a man of quiet, yet pleasing personality who was very charitable, but guarded his kindly acts with secreey. Everyone who knew him was his friend and all respected him highly. Surviving are his wife, a son, William D., and a daughter, Misa Maud H. Blasier of this city, and two grandchildren, Mrs. Walter Burlingham of Binghamiou and Miss Dorothy Blanier of Ronie.

Of Revolutionary Stock.

Captain Edward Blasier, a native o Onelda County, New York, and uncle of Melva Blasier, Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Locke and Mrs. R. J. Mengle of Canastota died at his home at Williamsburg, Iowa, Dec. 29, 1907 aged 77 years; Captalli Blasier was highly respected in the community in which he resided and from the lengthy obituary notice published by the Williamshurg Journal-Tribune we glean that he spring from a notrble family, older than our pountry. His grandfather, Lawrence Blassier was a soldier in the Revolution and his Mother's father fenght in the war of 1812. He himself culisted twice during the civil war, serving four years and a braver soldier never wore his country's blue. Captain Blasier was a brother of Ichabod Blazier, father of the local members of the family, who died at Easi Boston about 23 years ago.

Home Reception.

Mrs. William D. Blasier, 203 Syramore street, entertained a group of friends at a reception held at her home on Monday evening in honor of Miss Maud H. Blasier, 642 N. James street, whose marriage to Edward P. Scheidleman of this city is to take place in the near future. A social hour was spent and a dainty luncheon served, the table presenting a beautiful appearance with the dedecorathe color scheme of pink and white. Miss Blasier was showered with the hearty felicitations of all present and she was the recipient of several fine gifts.

Mysterious Affair.

A correspondent furnishes us the particulars of the mysterious disappearance of a half-witted girl, the daughter of respectable parents, living near Hulbertville, in April fast, since which time no trace of her whereabouts had been received by her friends until a few days since, when she was found living in a hut, by some hunters. The hut is built in one of the most uninviting gulfe and seeluded points in the town of Western in this county. Her condition is represented to have been most pitiable. For three weeks, during which time her keeper was ill and unable to be out, birch bark and buds of trees were her principal subsistance. It is asserted that she was taken to this spot and kept by a man who has already two wives living. Our correspondent states that she was prevailed to return to her parents. One Isalah Hart interfered with this dispesal of the girl and struck at one of the party with an axe, who was carrying the girl's bundle of rage. but the blow was warded off and the fist of Clark. planted in Hart's face, fell him to the ground. A warrant has been issued by Justice Wheelock for Hart's arrest for assault and battery with intent to kill. .

Ira W. Hart Dead.

On Saturday Ira W. Hart, a well-known resident, died at his home on the Black River canal south of this village. He was taken ill about one week before his death with pneumonia and for several days last week it was thought he could not recover. Mr. Hart's career has been an eventful one. He was born in this town and has spent the greater part of his life here. In business matters he was remarkably shrewd and made many a sharp bargain. With his family he was kind and indulgent and will be greatly missed by them, He leaves a wife and five daughters. The funeral was held at Lansinghill chapel Tuesday and was largely attended, Rev. T. F. Jessup officiating. The remains were interred in the Boonville cemetery.

ware a series of the M. Cott fill 88"loon and the brothel. There are hundredsof thousands of ruined American homes. Through beer saloons and beer gardens multitudes of young girls especially have been involved in moral ruin. I believe that this investigation will show that the beer traffic and the traffic in spirits is respoasible for a great deal of this degradation and ruin." The same gentleman speaks of the ruin brought on the children by drink. The New York society for the prevention of cruelty to children, has over 40,000 children on the records, and mostly through the influence of intoxicants. The statistics of Life Insurance companies show the terrible effects of intoxicating drinks even when taken in moderation.

The Queen of Madagascar, refusing permission to sell or use rum, recently proclaimed; 'I cannot take a revenue from anything that will debase or deprave my people.

The Chinese Imperial Commissioner, Linn says: - "Not to use optum one's self, and yet to venture on the manufacture and sale of it, and with it to seduce the simple people of this land, this is to seek one's own advantage by other men's injury, to seek one's own advantage by exposing others to death. Such acts are utterly abhorrent to the nature of man and utterly opposed to the way of Heaven."

Now what opium is to the Chinese, the intoxicating drinks are to the American. The whisky committee can learn love of man and love of country from even the "heathen."

The prisoners of the country cost over $15,000,000 yearly. The police in large cities cost nearly $15,000,000 more. The costs of the law machinery and trials mount high into the millions as well. The vast majority of this expense is on account of drink.
